

Parenting by the Word

Training children is like training tomatoes!

The stem of a tomato plant will fall under the weight of the fruit if it doesn't have some help.

It needs some hands-on attention!

Putting a stake in the ground next to the plant and tying the stem to the stake as it grows and begins to produce fruit will keep it from falling one way or the other. This keeps the fruit from falling onto the ground and spoiling, or being eaten by worms.

We must train our children to grow strong by gently pulling them back in line each time they stray. We bring them back to the standard of Word of God and the right way to do things.

Just as the tomato plant will grow strong and tall and produce many crops of tomatoes, our children will grown strong, able to withstand pressures and be producers of much good fruit.
